

Smart Cards for Future Health-Care Systems

The costs of health care are exploding in almost every country of the world. Governmental organizations are therefore aiming to increase the efficiency and transparency of their health-care systems using smart cards.

And this is where card-enabled e-health networks from Giesecke & Devrient come into play. Drawing on ten years of global experience and numerous successful e-health projects, G&D can help find the right solution. Smart health cards from G&D are the key to health-care systems of the future.

As an international technology group, founded in 1852, G&D specializes in printing currencies and security documents, and in manufacturing currency automation systems. Today, G&D is also a leading provider of smart-card solutions for telecommunications, electronic payments, ID and health care.

Creating Confidence.
